ABOUT OUR PRODUCTS

Air Filters: Ideally, the home should provide its residents with comfort and protection. Unfortunately in the real world the home is easy prey for pollutants that are generated from both inside and out. As these pollutants multiply, they can cause the resident discomfort and, in some cases, even to become ill. While individuals can reduce the total pollutant load in their home by paying careful attention to the products they use to build and furnish it and by eliminating the kind of activities, such as smoking cigarettes, that can cause a dramatic increase in air pollution, they may still find that to obtain and maintain the best quality indoor air an air purifier and regular air sampling for various contaminants may be necessary.

Bedding: As with clothing, any product made of fabric runs the risk of carrying contaminants from being treated with dyes or chemicals. Our blankets, pillows and bedding products are untreated organic or natural cotton.

Clothing: The fabrics used in clothing are a particularly insidious source of pollution. Natural fabrics can become contaminated during the manufacturing process when dyes and chemicals are added to them. Synthetic fabrics, which are oil based, are also chemically contaminated. For those individuals seeking a less polluted lifestyle, careful consideration of the fabrics used in clothing is essential. The clothing we sell is 100% organic cotton in natural colors.

Personal Care Products: One common source of pollutant exposure is the daily care products we use for skin cleansing, hair washing, and body odor reduction. Commonly, commercial soaps and shampoos, body and face lotions, make-up, deodorants, and colognes are manufactured with a variety of chemical preservatives, additives, fragrances, and/or dyes, any of which can cause adverse reactions in sensitive individuals. To combat this situation, we offer a variety of personal health products that are naturally or organically produced and free of the contaminants frequently found in commercial products.

Household Cleaning Products: A typical source of environmental contamination is products used for household cleaning, pet care, and various chemical treatments for pest control, both indoors and outdoors. It is imperative that those seeking a healthful lifestyle and reduction in pollutant exposure choose with care the products they use to clean and maintain their homes, yards, and pets. To meet this need, we offer a variety of products that are free of many of the common contaminants found in commercial household products.

Home Test Kits: Ideally, the home should provide its residents with comfort and protection. Unfortunately, however, in the real world the home is easy prey for pollutants that are generated from both inside and out. As these pollutants multiply, they can cause the resident discomfort and in some cases even to become ill. While individuals can reduce the total pollutant load in their home by paying careful attention to the products they use to build and furnish it and by eliminating the kind of activities, such as smoking cigarettes, that can cause a dramatic increase in air pollution, they may still find that to obtain and maintain the quality indoor air an air purifier and regular air and water sampling for various contaminants may be necessary.

Vitamins & Supplements: One of the surest ways to maintain good health and combat illness is to keep the body's natural defense mechanisms functioning optimally. Good nutrition is essential to achieving this goal. However, the nutrient value of most of our commercially produced food has been substantially reduced over the past 50 years as a result of over processing and the use of chemical additives and preservatives. Supplementation of vitamins and minerals has now become essential to insuring that we receive our recommended daily allowance of these. Unfortunately, many commercially manufactured nutritional supplements also contain unhealthy additives and preservatives. The vitamin and mineral supplements that we carry, however, are hypoallergenic. They do not contain the normal allergens from sources such as wheat, corn, yeast, soy, sugar, eggs, dyes or other additives. The manufacturers use the purest products and manufacturing methods available to them, and whenever possible, they use organically grown plants for their sources.

Water Filtration Systems: Sources of drinking water are springs, lakes, rivers, reservoirs, wells, and rain cisterns. While most of these sources of water were clean at one time in the history of the planet, population growth coupled with the adoption of public policies that have not served to ensure that maintenance of pure water at its source have contributed to widespread water contamination. Yet water purity is critical to maintaining human health. Individuals interested in securing optimum health must pay attention to the source of their water. Not only will they ingest contaminants from drinking water, they will also absorb pollutants when they breathe in the steam of their showers and they will absorb contaminants through skin contact when they wash. As well, pollutants will contaminate the foods that are washed and prepared with tap water from, public water supplies. For those wanting to protect their health by controlling the quality of the water they admit into their home, we offer a variety of water filtration systems.
